

OPERATION TRANSLATION

Yosub Shin lives in Korea. His mom and dad divorced when he was a young boy, and Yosub lived with his mom. At school, Yosub became a troublemaker. Then, because of his bad reputation, when there was trouble at school, the teachers blamed Yosub—sometimes fairly and sometimes not. Yosub was not a happy boy.

One day a Christian pastor's wife met Yosub on the street and invited him to church. Yosub invited his mother to come with him. At church they learned about Jesus.

Yosub trusted Jesus as his Savior and was baptized. But it was not easy for him to clear up his bad reputation. One year Yosub went to Vacation Bible School. His life began to change, and he decided to follow and obey Jesus.

Yosub is now 17. He wants to glorify Jesus in everything he does. He faithfully goes to church and Sunday School. He is changing to become the young man God wants him to be. Yosub says that he wants to serve God in every way he can.

Ten million children live in South Korea. The churches there are asking for more materials in the Korean language. Two Korean ladies are working hard to translate English Sunday School lessons into Korean. Your generous donation to Operation Translation: Help Me Learn about God in My Own Language will help to get these materials printed so that even more people in Korea can learn about God in their own language.
